Israelis defy world, approve new program of Jewish settlements cabinet Sunday approved a new settlement program in defiance of world opposition to Jewish settlements on Palestinian lands,

The decision, announced by Cabinet Secretary Arve Naor, resulted from the debate that has followed an Israeli Supreme Court order for removal of the disputed Elon Moreh settlement from its hilltop site on the Jordan West Bank.

The court ruled against Elon Moreb because it was partly on private Palestinian land. The five judges said private land could he seized only for security purposes and that Elon Moreb did not fulfill this requirement.

The new settlement program appeared intended to mollify Jewish extremists, such as loss of Elon Moreh. The extremists were embittered at the order to leave the site, just outside the West Bank town of Nablus.

The extremists were worried that the supreme court ruling, by forbidding private land seizures except for security reasons, might jeopardize the whole settlement program. They demanded changes in the law to permit private land seizures.

Sunday's decision to plant more settlements on government land seemed hardly likely to please the extremist Gush Emunim settler movement.

This would restrict them to land registered as belonging to the Jordanian government prior to the Israeli occupation in the 1967 war. The Gush Emunim says this is not

Naor told reporters the cabinet decision was in principle only and did not deal specifically with how many new settlements should be set up and where they should be Naor said Elon Moreh will be shifted to a site on "government land" near Nablus.

Naor said Israel's attorney general is now studying the legal position concerning occupied land and will report to the cabinet in due course. But experts have already stressed that changing the laws about Palestinian land might be difficult without formally annexing them to the state of Israel. Such a step would bring fierce opposition from abroad.

Nablus mayor to be deported

NABLUS, Nov. 11 (Agencies) - Israeli occupation authorities arrested the Palestinian Mayor of Nablus Sunday and prepared to deport him because of his opposition to Camp David peace accords.

The move against Mayor Bassam Shakaa roused immediate tension in the West Bank. The rest of the 10-man Nablus municipal council promptly resigned. Other West Bank mayors consulted on whether to walk out in

An official statement said the expulsion of Shakaa from his West Bank homeland would go ahead as soon as a temporary court injunction had been set aside. This temporary injunction, restraining Israeli authorities from expelling Sbakaa, was obtained by his relatives last week.

The manner in which the case against Shakaa was pressed produced sharp reaction in the Occupied territories.

Shakua had long charged the Israelis wanted to rid of him because of his support for the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and his opposition to Israel's plan for allowing mild Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank while keeping it under indefinite

But the alleged remark the Israelis complained of was made by Shakaa during a private meening last Tuesday with Israeli occupation officials including the chief West Bank administrator, Brig. Gen. Dany Matt.

According to Israeli sources, Gen. Matt pressed Shakaa for his view of the Palestinian attack on a coastal bighway north of Tel Aviv

Two versions emerged of what Sbakaa had replied to Gen. Matt. The official Israeli version was broadcast within hours on the state radio, before a formal report bad been received by the government.

This version quoted Shakaa as saying: "1 justify and identify with the murders last year in the bus and on the coastal road. As long as there is occupation lots of more actions can be expected." Sources close to Shakaa gave this version of his remarks: "There is occupation and there is killing (meaning killing by Israelis in South Lebanon) and many more actions like the coastal road attack can be expected as long as this situation confinues." The radio version of Shakaa's remarks brought swift demands in the Israe Reports

(parliament) for his expulsion. Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, though at first reported reluctant to pursue the matter, told the Supreme Court List Friday he intended going ahead with it. Sunday's military announcement said

Shakaa had been summoned to Israeii headquarters where the expulsion order was read out. After this the mayor was locked up in Ramle prison, half way between Jerusalem

Shopkeepers and businessmen immediately went on strike in Nablus. A group of residents, mostly women, gathered at the town hall singing Palestinian nationalist songs. Israeli troops surrounded two secondary schools to keep pupils from streaming'

Sbakaa, a member of a merchant family, is a popular figure on the West Bank. He is the most outspoken of all the West Bank mayors against Israeli occupation and Jewisb settlement on Palestinian land.

Shakaa was a prime mover in presenting the petition which persuaded Israel's supreme court to order the uprooting of disputed Elon Morch settlement just outside Nablus.

This decision dismayed Jewish extremists who saw it as a setback to their plans for wholesale seizure of private Palestinian land. While Shakaa was being taken to jail the Israeli cabinet met to discuss future settlement plans. An official spokesman said ministers agreed to authorize an unspecified cumber of new suttlements at unspecified locations in the West Bank and other occupied territories. But the ministers decided these settlements would be only on "public land" - not on confiscated private areas as the extremists have been insisting.

The PLO also held an emergency meeting Saturday to discuss Israel's deportation of

The PLO said it would mount an international campaign against the deportation of the mayor of Nablus.

The PLO said it would raise the case at the Tunis summit of the Arab League which starts on Nov. 20, lobby United Nations members and write to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Pope's appeal Khomeini rejects wielding Syrian peacekeeping troops.

TEHRAN, Nov. 11 (Agencies) — Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini Sunday rejected an appeal by Pope John Paul II to free the more than 60 American hostages at the U.S. embassy here, State Radio said.

And Palestine Liberation Organization delegation chief Brig. Sand Sayel left Iran after conferring with Iranian authorities on the hostage situation.

there was little doubt bere that it signalled that the PLO's efforts to mediate an end to the crisis had failed. Khomeini criticized the Vatican for "nor holy city of Qom, that the Pope should instead appeal to President Jimmy Carter to extradite the Sbah, who is undergoing cancer treatment in New York. Extradition of the Shah has been the major demand of the students who bave beld the hostages - including 15 women - since they stormed the embassy last Sunday. While Khomeini rejected the Papal appeal, he did agree to allow Bugnini to enter the compound to see the hostages, who include abont 40 Indians and Pakistanis in addition to the 60 Americans.

Saturday, ambassadors from four countries - France, Sweden, Syria and Algeria - were also allowed into the compound and reported that the 100 bostages were in good condition. Sunday, the country's acting foreign minister, Abdol Hassan Bani Sadr, said he will summon all foreign ambassadors in Tehran to a special meeting where he will ask them to put pressure on the U.S. to return the Shah.

He said the meeting would be held Monday or Tuesday, but gave no other details.

In Riyadh, meanwhile, the Saudi newspaper Al -Jazirah Sunday quoted what it called well-informed sources as saying "it is certain the American bostages held in Tehran will be freed within 48 hours."

It did not give the source of its report, but said the release would come about because of the efforts of the PLO to ease the crisis. However, a spokesman for the Iranian foreign ministry said there was no basis for

In Beirut, a crowd of Iranian students attempted to storm the American embassy there Sunday, but were repulsed by baton-

Scores of students had entered the embassy compound and burned an American flag, but made no move to enter the tightly guarded embassy building itself.

After two hours, club-swining Syrian troops chased them away, while other Syrian forces fired their rifles in the air to belp scare off the demonstrators.

U.S. Marine guards, carrying rifles and walkie-talkies had guarded the embassy building against any attempts by the crowd to force its way inside.

In Tehran, in the first overt demonstration of support for the students inside the embassy by members of the armed forces, about 200 members of the Iranian Air Force appeared m uniform before the embassy Sunday to demand an end to all relations with the U.S.

The air force group, joining thousands of anti-American protestors in front of the embassy, read off demands that all ties with the U.S. be cut, all foreign military advisers be expelled from Iran, and all foreign capital be nationalized.

Sources in Ankara, Turkey, where a PLO delegation has been meeting with a high-level U.S. group in an attempt to ease the situation, said that the hostages inside the embassy included 62 Americans, 36 Indians and Pakistanis and one Italian.

IDB building formally dedicated in Jeddah

Since its establishment in 1975, the bank was housed at Al-Niaba Palace, which once belonged to the late King Faisal. The huge fruit and vegetable market facing the bank was moved to two other locations at

Al-Quarantine district and along Crown

Prince Fahd Street. In his opening address, bank President Dr. Ahmad Muhammad Ali said Saudi Arabia, along with Libya, the UAE and Kuwait were the largest contributors in the bank's authorized capital which now stands at $2.6 billion. He thanked Prince Fawaz for officiating and unveiling a memorial plague and said that Saudi Arabia had also given SR18 million for the construction and furnishing of the new premises.

He added that so far the bank has financed 111 projects in 30 member countries to a total sum of about $ 930 million. He said that among the main methods which the bank used was granting interestfree loans to developing states in conformity with the principles of the Sharia. Another method is equity participation in industrial and agricultural projects with immediate financial return; and the third method consisted in financing projects and transactions on profit sharing basis, Dr. Ali

He said that the bank also provided technical assistance to member states for feasibility studies and other procedures preceding finance requests.

To promote and strengthen economic, financial and trade cooperation among its members, the bank so far financed 43 foreign trade transactions among 17 member countries, totalling $ 529 million, he said.

He said that the bank also financed part of the Trans-Saharan Road Project which connects North and West Africa as well as other "important joint projects to support and strengthen economic and financial cooperation between a number of member coun-

JEDDAH, Nov. 11 - The Ministry of Commerce has asked the Council of Ministers to impose tariff on vehicle spare parts nports. Probably of slightly over 10 per cent, the duty will be intended to protect the young local manufacturing industry.

It was learnt here that the ministry's request to the cabinet was a result of requests by companies involved in parts manufacture, who argued that in the long run they could make locally-produced parts available more cheaply than

The major manufacturers of parts in Jeddah are Hino, Saudi Automotive, which makes buses under license from the American Ward, and Juffali's National Automobile Industries. Smaller plants exist across the Kingdom for producing tires.

There is some controversy over whether the young industry really needs protection. The price of imported parts has increased substantially recently, and in some cases the Saudi Arabian product now undercuts the foreign.

Farouk Jamjoom, the Peugeot agent for the Western Region, though, opposes such protection.

He argues that in the end it w only be more expensive to pr duce here. On top of that, it was not be easy to adjust to each year developments.

Butros returned to Beirui Saturday night and went straight to the presidential palace to brief President Elias Sarkis on the outcome of his talks

At issue was Lebanon's fears that its working paper for the planned summit would collide with that of Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization on the southern Lebanon issue:

Sarkis dispatched Butros to talk Assad and Khaddam into eliminating the eventuality of collision between the two working papers when the summit convenes Nov. 20 in Tunis.

W. Bank Palestinians get $1.3m aid

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 — The American Near East Refugee Aid (ANERA) reports it gave over $ 1.3 million last year to assist Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, and for war-relief projects in Lebanon.

The more than $ 1.3 million represented 90 per cent of ANERA's 1979 fiscal year budget (October 1978 through September 1979) and was spent for community and economic development, education and health service projects.

Some of the largest ANERA community and economic undertakings on the West Bank and Gaza were $ 120,000 for establishing a modern soap factory using an olive byproduct, $ 120,000 for purchasing tractors and buildozers and $ 90,000 for sewer system expansion.

Dayan calls on Israel to prevent autonomy deadlock

TEL AVIV. Nov. 11 (R) — Former Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan has said Israel should take the initiative to prevent a deadlock in negotiations for Palestinian autonomy.

Addressing the current affairs group in his first public appearance since resigning from the government last month, Dayan said Saturday the United States, Egypt and the Palestinians were not interested in speeding up the negotiations.

"But we have the interest and ability to avoid a deadlock in negotiations and implement the basic autonomy principles granting as much liberty to the Palestinians in running their affairs and maintaining Israeli settlement on the occupied West Bank of Jordan and in the Gaza Strip," Dayan

Autonomy talks began last May and set a one-year period during which Egypt, Israel and the United States hope to define the extent of authority with which a Palestinian elected council for the regions will be invested.

Egypt seeks wide powers, while Israel offers severely limited dayto-day authority.

Dayan, who quit the cabinet over political differences, mainly on the Palestinian issue, repeated his suggestion that Israel withdraw its military government from the areas to come under Palestinian self-rule.

Afghan army defections threaten Amin regime

Ry Afzel Kha

PESHAWAR, Nov. 11 (OFNS) — The rebellion against the Soviet-backed regime in Afghanistan is becoming increasingly bloody as both sides try to consolidate their positions before the harsh winter slows down fighting in this mountainous country.

The ability of the government to contain the rebellion depends on the continued loyalty of the conscript army and the rapid replensishment of losses in men and material. From what can be gleaned from sketchy rebel statistics, at least 6,000 government troops, including officers up to the rank of brigadier, have defected.

More than 10,000 government troops may have been killed — a big dent in the 100,000-strong Afghan army pitted against probably 300,000 guerrillas. At least 30 MiG jets and 20 helicopters have been downed, while destroyed tanks and armored personnel-carriers run into the hundreds.

The loyalty of government troops is questionable except for a hard core of Khalq Party officers. The Marxist Khalq or People's Party was founded in 1969 and is the only ruling party in Afghanistan today. Morale is low among conscripts, who are inducted at 22 years for a two-year stint but are now forced to continue service. Many are loath to fight kith and kin in this civil war.

Despite higher pay introduced recently, many prospective draftees are either absconding or disappearing from their villages to join the rebels. The government is recruiting younger men and trying to build up its Khalq Party youth cadres.

The guerrillas train in refugee camps just across the border in the semi-autonomous tribal belt that stretches all along the eastern and southern borders of Afghanistan and are financed and directed by half a dozen organization led by Afghan religious leaders based in Peshawar.

Religious and spiritual leaders, or mulabs and pirs, have traditionally guided the tribes in such crises. Hafizullah Amin's government is seen by the tribal guerrillas as an un-Islamic.

No guerrilla leader has yet emerged who can be accepted by all the groups. Althought the enemy is common and the cause Islamic, battles are being fought by local commanders without an overall strategy.

There is, however, a possibility that a hereditary pir, Syed Ahmad Gailani, may emerge as the de facto leader once his successes on the battlefield are recognized by the other groups. Gailani is descended from Hazrat Syed Abdul Qalir Gailani, thirteenth in line of descent from the Prophet Muhammad and the founder of the Qadri sect of Sufi Islam.

Gailani founded the National Front of the Islamic Revolution of Afghanistan after he fled from Kabul in December, 1978. His group boasts at least 70,000 guerrillas and he can muster up to 300,000 Pathans who revere him as their spiritual leader.

THE IRANIAN VIEW

Friends of the Iranian revolution cannot but feel embarrassed by the continuing occupation of the United States embassy and the detention of the hostages. There certainly can be no justification for such a breach of diplomatic immunity. The harm such actions could do to the very principles of diplomatic representation is incalculable.

Yet friends of the Iranian revolution, while unable to justify the deed, can certainly understand the depth of hittemess that underlies it. They also realize that had the American administration heen aware of Iranian feelings nothing would bave happened to its embassy in Tehran. Indeed, bad the American administration been aware of the truth of the Iranian situation, the change of regime there would not bave been as costly in Iranian blood.

It is for this reason that Ayatollah Khomeini can declare his inability to understand America's reaction to the detention of the hostages. The Iranian people were bostages to the Shah's regime for twenty-five years, be says, with no visible American reaction. The Palestinians, too, he says, have been uprooted these last thirty years, with no visible concern for their fate.

Abul Hassan Bani Sadr, the present strong man in the Iranian government, says something very similar. Richard Nixon, he tells the Americans, was forced to resign merely for bugging an office. They then are angered by Iranian reaction when America takes to its heart the Shah, who is wanted to stand criminal trial on incomparably

The Iranians also demand that the Sbah's property outside of Iran is repatriated. They estimate it officially at around twenty-four hillion dollars. Yet the Americans can answer that both the issues of banding the Sbah or his property over to the present regime are really outside of the administration's jurisdiction; and that nothing of this in any case can justify taking American citizens as hostages or occupation of the embassy.

It is clear now that neither the Iranian nor the American side can retreat from its stand. All that the rest of the world can hope and call for is that the incident brought to an end somehow without prejudice to the hostages' lives. In this connection, the only hope, slim though it might be, is offered by the Palestine Liberation Organization's mediatory effort. No cause is at the moment nearer to Iran's heart than that of the Palestinians. Let us bope that Ayatollah Khomeini accept their intercession on behalf of the hostages.

The rush to flee East Europe

By Michael Getler

A surge of refugees from Eastern Europe seeking asylum in the West is puzzling Western officials. who speculate that it could reflect worsening times in the East or be an expected side effect of East-West derente

The marked increase in defectors seems beyond dispute.

Karl Radek, director of the big refugee camp at Traiskirchen in neutral Austria, said in a telephone interview that in eight or nine weeks this summer, about 1,500 Czechnslovakians alone passed through his camp, the largest number in a short period since the Soviet invasion of Prague II years

This influx, along with smaller numbers from other Soviet-bloc countries, took place as a littlenoticed sidelight to a major flap in Eastern Europe

It was touched offearly in August when Romania suddenly announced that foreign tourists would have to pay for gasoline with Western money. The rulings by the maverick communist state caused outrage in the rest of the Eastern bloc and big traffic jams at borders. Each year, about a million East European tourists travel through Romania to the Black Sea beaches of Bulgaria.

To defuse the problem, the governments of Czechnslovakia, Pnland and Hungary allowed citizens already underway to travel through neighboring Yugoslavia instead, without visas. Yugoslavia, although a communist country, is outside the Soviet-bloc and liberal by communist standards. Several hundred families took the opportunity to flee from there into Austria and Italy.

The Eastern bloc shut off these special travel permits by the end of September, but defections have continued.

Some have been widely publicized, such as the two East German families who escaped to West Germany in a hot-air halloon, the pair of Soviet skating stars and three well-known Soviet ballet dancers.

But there have been many others. In northern West Germany, four busioads of Polisb soccer fans were returning home Oct. 19 from a game in Holland. At a rest stop, 24 of them slipped away and asked for asylum.

On Sept. 29, the best-known sculptor in Bulgaria, 77-year-old Lyuhomir Dalchev and his family quietly decided to stay in the West after an exhibition in Vienna.

Last week, a 36-year-old Soviet technician asked for asylum in Sweden.

The Swiss government announced it had granted political asylum to a ranking Czechoslovak tennis player, Hana Strachonova, 18.

A Soviet journalist in Tokyo defected two weeks ago. The emigration of cultural figures from East Germany has continued as author Guenther Kunert and actor Armin Mueller-Stahl left for West Ger-

Western officials here and in Austria who keep track of these developments have no easy explanation for the upsurge, although the Romanian gasoline crisis provided what Radek calls a special opportunity for people who may have toyed with the idea of defecting for years but otherwise might

Undoubtedly, officials say, a generally worsening economic situation and rising prices in many East European countries has produced doubts about the

"I think its economics plus," said one experienced diplomat," And the plus is the key. What you see now is a sprinkling of people from everywhere. It's not just that it's Czechoslovakia. In many cases, they are also just ordinary people, not stars, and so one can perhaps think it is because they feel they haven't much hope.

Another diplomat talked of uncertainty about what he called the end of the Brezhnev era in the East and of growing allienation of some youth.

Nico Huehner, a young East German who received a jail sentence for refusing to serve in the army, recently told a news conference after he was allowed to leave for the West that large numbers of East Germans his age had turned away from the East German hrand of socialism.

Another official suggests that the East's widespread use of forced exile to get rid of dissident intellectuals - apparently on the basis that they are less harmful to the Eastern governments once in the West and out to their native element — may be a

In this view, it is probably true that people like exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn are less powerful critics speaking from the West than the East. But, the official said, it may be that the forced exile will not cancel it out.

Several officials said the exodus is part of the cheral liberalization that bas gradualy unfolded through detente in Europe in recent years.

Travel restrictions in Poland, for example, have been loosened, as the Austrian camp director Radek pointed out. Travel East and West, and thus the number of Eastemers exposed to the West, steadily is increasing. - tWP)

Giscard's troubles escalating

By Pani Webster

PARIS — After the suicide of the French Labor Minister Robert Boulin, President Valery Giscard of Estaing is under pressure to take urgent action to restore public confidence in his government.

The president is confronted with a long list of problems, including the illness of Raymond Barre, the prime minister, tensions in the cahinet, a successful Gaullist revolt in parliament, personal scandals affecting himself, Barre and his former labor minister, as well as the collapse of the first phase of his strategy to retain the presidency in 1981.

The press, which quickly shook off accusations for responsibility for the minister's suicide after revelations of a duhious real estate deal, is now unanimous in demanding emergency measures to deal with the multiple crisis. Only the minister's funeral on November 3, with most of the government present, delayed decision-making.

Boulin's suicide was prohably the worst psychological blow for the president in a month of crisis. In letters posted just before be died he attacked Minister of Justice Alain Peyrefitte, for putting his career before the proper administration of justice' and accused his political friends of letting him down or of conspiring against him.

Boulin, a traditional anti-Chirac Gaullist, who served longer than any minister in French history, was favored to become premier. Peyrefitte, the government's second ranking minister, was his main rival. The implication that documents conceming the real estate deal were leaked by the Justice Ministry to impede Boulin has led to reports that Peyrefitte will resign.

In a matter of weeks, President Giscard has been rohbed of the most important tactic in his moves to check a hid by the Gaullist leader, Jacques Chirac, for the presidency. All the main anti-Chirac Gaullists in his cahinet, who are essential as running cahinet—has been one of mates to split the Gaullist vote in the president's past few days.—(OFNS) running for the premiership is the National Assem bly Speaker Jacques Chahan-Delmas, who carries the double burden of a disastrous presidential hid in 1974 and a long-standing scandal over income tax when he was prime minister in 1972.

The silence of Jacques Chirac - while Presiden Giscard hesitates on methods to sdeal with his own Bokassa diamonds scandal and tensioos inside the cabinet - has been one of the notable events of the

The home fires burn on in Zimbabwe Rhodesia

By Aloin Shuster

SALISBURY -The airliner descends into Salishury airport in a spiral, a deliberate corkscrew landing that serves as an antimissile maneuver and a reminder that while the peace talks on Zimbahwe Rhodesia inch along in London, the war goes on, often at an intense

Salishury itself is deceptive; the 50 or so who die every day die elsewhere, along borders and in the countryside. So the musical Oh What a Lovely War is performed nightly at the Rainbow Arts Luxury Theater while the list of those "killed on active service" in a not-so-lovely war is published daily in

The other day, they had their annual Jacaranda Festival to coincide with the magnificent blooms' season, and colorful floats passed before a large crowd of blacks and whites lining the main street. Indeed, the mix here of the races, the easy relationship between whites and blacks, is one of the surprises for a first-time visitor, particularly one who arrives from South Africa.

Black men employ white secretaries and white men, black. The races mingle behind the counters in department stores, on buses, in restaurants and in the lobhies of downtown botels where locals, not just tourists, come in for coffee and drinks. Reladons between the races have always been better here than in South Africa. "You don't see hate in the eyes of blacks here," said one white husinesswoman who has spent time in Johannesburg.

Many of the changes, including the abolition of all statutory discrimination, were too long delayed and came only because of worldwide pressure. At the airport, for example, white immigration officers are now training blacks, a recent innovation and one that should have occurred a long time ago. But some changes have come, nevertheless, and, while many blacks feel that more needs to be done, others' express confidence that it is only a matter of time before they gain more johs in the civil service. judiciary and other areas. What appears to worry them at the moment, apart from the war - is the failure of the new black government of Ahel Muzorewa to improve their living standards.

Muzorewa, who hecame prime minister earlier this year after elections that followed the resignation of lan Smith's white minority government, is in London for negotiations with the leaders of the guerrilla forces who have been waging the horder war. The acting prime minister is Edward Mazaiwana, the minister of education, a courtly 59-year-old teacher who receives visitors in the stark office once occupied by Smith.

"It's true that many blacks feel that this government has not delivered," Mazaiwana said, "They hoped that when Muzorewa came to power the war would stop and sanctions would be lifted and more jobs would open up and salaries would go bigher. This basn't happened. So we have replaced a crisis of expectation with a crisis of frustration. We have not yet delivered the goods. If only the sanctions

This is the repeated refrain among officials and others here: Zimhahwe Rhodesia has an elected black prime minister, and he is showing reason in the peace sessions: the Patriotic Front wants to win by the gun rather than ballot; and, no matter the outcome of the talks, there should no longer be grounds for maintaining the sanctions that have plagued this country since it unilaterally declared independence from Britain some 15 years ago.

"We are trying to build a democratic society here," said Herbert Kimuto, the minister of home affairs." It is not perfect, but we have accepted the ideals of democracy. As for the sanctions, they have done more harm to the blacks in this country than the whites. They've hindered our progress. If the sanctions were lifted, the war would de-escalate, our morale would be boosted, and we would be in a position to give blacks here some economic progress, more johs, more investment. "Unlike the Patriotic Front, we don't want to force the whites to leave. We don't have the skilled manpower yet. We need these people. Many ofthem were born here. We want the whites to feel they have nothing to fear."

That is one of the dilemmas. Most blacks agree that the white minority holds too much residual power in parliament, the judiciary, the civil service and the police. But they recognize Muzorewa's problem: He must convince blacks that things are changing while convincing the whites that things are not changing too much, too soon.

As for sanctions, that issue will be resolved sometime after the London meeting. Accordingly, all eyes are on London, where hard bargaining is under way on how new elections should be arranged. Many whites have postponed decisions on whether to join the exodus until they see the outcome of

"We don't want to leave," said a white business-man, "but if it looks as if the Patriotic Front is going to win out and Muzorewa is finished, we're going. Where? I don't know."

Like everyone else here, he's waiting. The whole country, in fact, is in a state of suspense. Normal activities do go on - the party thrown hy the Chibuko National Sorghum Growers Association, the dinner of the dean of the Anglican Church, the Rotary Club luncheon. All around town, cars driven by whites bear the humper sticker: "I am staying to help make it work."

At the Rainbow Arts Luxury Theater, someone sings ' 'Keep the Home Fires Burning.' ' It isn't easy. - (LAT)

Newspapers Sunday mostly led with King Kbaled's opening of the new expansion of Yanhu seaport next Saturday, also highlighting the monarch's meeting with former Lehanese Premier Saeh Salam. Okaz played as its lead story the Syro-Lebanese discussions on the coordination of their attitude during the Arah summit in Tunis, while Al -Jazirah said in its lead story that the American hostages in Iran might be released within two days as a result of Palestinian efforts.

In a front-page story, Al-Jazirah quoted the new Iranian Foreign Minister as saying Iran has other means to force the United States to hand over the Shah to Iran. It also highlighted a report on the movement of U.S. naval units from Karacbi to an unknown direction.

Nearly all the papers frontpaged King Khaled's impending visit to Yanhu to open the new extensions and Prince Abdullah's visits to Jordan and Morocco. In a front-page story, Al-Medina reported the Afghan freedom-fighters as having inflicted heavy losses on the government forces. while Al -Bilad quoted U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim as urging the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC)to use its good offices with the Iranian authorities to obtain a release of the U.S. hostages.

In an editorial on the new expansion of Yanbu seaport, to be opened by King Khaled Saturday, Al-Nadwa said the enhanced capabilities of the port will give a further boost to the national economy. It praised the efforts of the Saudi Arabian Ports Authority in increasing the efficiency of Saudi ports by being able to eliminate the causes of bottlenecks and reorganizing everything with all possible means at its command. The Authority bas proved achievements in the future. After all, it bas proved through its dedicated work that it is worthy of confidence and can bear responsibilities vested with it (in the best interests of the nation), the paper

Al -Jazirah hoped the forthcoming Arab summit meeting will rise above all differences as well as ideological and political contradictions. The paper expected the summit to dedicate itself for pan-Arah interests without caring for personal or regional motives.

The critical political situation existing in the Arab East and West might throw an obstacle before the summit which is going to be held mainly to find a solution to the chronic problem of South Lebanon." The paper added that some people might be led to think that Egypt's exit from the Arab ranks and the support that the tate the latter's task in finding Egyptian move has received from some positive ways for a settlesome Arab states might make the conference's success doubtful. Still, the paper hoped that the Arabs will maintain their past ferences and concentrating on the realization of national interests. "The summit's success will liquidate a serious problem that has beset Lebanon and is now threatening to expand its horizon, the paper said, adding that the summit must strive to contain Arab differences and pave the way for Arah unity.

Dealing with the summit and the situation in Lehanon, Okaz reiterated that national accord in Lebanon itself might contribute to the success of the forthcoming summit, Accord among the concerned parties in Lebanon will facilitate the summit's task in working for the realization of stable and peaceful conditions in Lebanon. Besides, the paper added, "the cooperation of the Palestinian resistance with the Lebanese government will faciliment to the crisis now hanging on South Lebanon."

"Amid a variety of challenges, the Arab summit will be called utions as guarantee the restoration of peaceful conditions in Lehanon, so that Israel's aggressive designs can be successfully thwarted," the paper said.

Al -Bilad devoted its editorial to the visit of Prince Abdullah, second deputy premier and commander of the National Guard, to Jordan and Morocco, and said it "reaffirmed the Kingdom's keen desire to hold continuous meeting among brothers for a regular consultation on the Arab situation. Saudi Arabia's relations with Jordan and Morocco have not only provided strong elements for the collective stance of the Arabs but have also consolidated Arab action and their understanding in the face of the political and military maneuvers of the Zionist enemy," the paper said.

It hoped Prince Abdullah's visit will further strengthen the Arah stance, mainly because it is taking place just before the Arah summit of Tunis, which is expected to devote itself to a joint Arab action so earnestly sought by Saudi our evenings of 'Private Lives'

By Laura Winters Duke JEDDAH -Noel Coward's rivate Lives opens this evening at he British Embassy, directed hy aul Jones and produced by

The play is a classic of its kind. It irst opened in London in 1930 with Noel Coward, Gertrude awrence, Adrianne Allen and aurence Olivier.

Coward was a prodigious talent: playwright, director, actor, musician, painter. He was also quite the hedonist, reaching the zenith of his popularity in the 1920s. His humor is iconoclastic, shattering long-held ideals and poking the complacent and the pompous with biting wit.

"Really, my life has been one long extravaganza", he wrote after rereading his journals. When he turned 70, the whole of England stopped. The BBC ran seven nights of Coward entertainment and on Broadway, Private Lives opened to rave reviews. On January 1, 1970, his name appeared in the New Year's Honour's List as Knight Bachelor, for services to the ans. He died that year at firefly Hill, his house in Jamaica. T.E. Lawrence who was not able to make it to Private lives first night but who had come to several rebearsals and was by then a close friend of Coward's wrote tu congratulate the playwright and star:

Dear N.C. I was at the second night and wondered to see how perfectly the finished product went. Just once it slipped, when she the maid) drew the curtoins and the daylight took 20 seconds to come! Yet. I'm not sure that the bare works you showed me that afternoon were not better. For one thing. I could not always tell when vou were acting and when talking to one unother. So I would suggest my coming to another reheursal. only there seems nothing to prevent these ploys of yours running for ever, and so you will probably never write any inore.

As Lawrence predicted, the play was a brilliant success. Coward, to the consternation of his friends and the public, refused to play h for longer than three months but it was revived in 1944 with Sir John Gjelguid and, in America, Tallulah Bankhead toured in it fur twenty years after a long first run on Broadway.

It is, of course, a challenge for amateur players to attempt such a work. Comparisons are inevitable. but the cast for this production is an especially talented one. Several have experience on the London stage and television as well as in New York.

Geoffrey Kenion plays Elvot. an aristocrat who comes through the Depression with little knowledge that it happened at all. Kenion for ien years earned his living on the London stage and in relevision. His credits include such well known productions as mouse Trap. Dear Octupus and Howard's End as well as the television series Dickson of Dock Green and Fraud Squad. He has also toured with the Nottingham Players. His Jeddah credits include The Crucible and A Man for All Seasons. The role of Elvol is a challenge: light and frothy but by no means accessible. Linda Webber, who plays Amanda, has been an amateur actress for fifteen years. In Jeddah she has appeared in Ten Little Indians and A Streetear Named Desire. This is her first attempt at drawing room comedy.

Francesca Evans is Sybil, She studied theater and took the Guildhall exams in London. She has appeared in television commercials in England. Audiences here will remember her fine performance in Ten Little Indians. At twenty-three, she matures with each role. James Rooney combines engineering with a talent for the theater. He will make his Jeddah debut as Victor.

A mainstay of the Jeddah theater and a talented actress is Heather Bond who plays Louise. the maid.

Director Jones is a newcomer to the Kingdom who has had three of this works produced by the National Academy of Television Arts Society, Off-Broadway. After spending some time in the Middle East, he hopes to return tu his writing and perhaps use material gathered here for a play about foreigners in Saudi Arabia. He directed while at Columbia University and later in Iran, where he wrote and directed a Bicentennial production

Noel Coward, shown with his friends, directed and starred in Private Lives in 1930. S.E.T.'s production will run for four nights at the British Emhassy. Tickets (SR 20) are available at the door or by reservation at 53811. It is directed by Paul Jones and stars Geoffrey Kenion, Linda Webber, James Rooney and Heather Bond.

Riyadh - They couldn't find a piano in Tabuk.

In Taif, an audience of 15 sent a tenor scurrying for the sanctuary of his dressing room where he brooded behind a locked door.

At the haseball diamonds and picket fences of the Aramco compound in Dhahran they wanted music not, well, singing.

Impressarios Mr. and Mrs. Ingrams of Riyadh and Mme. Haffner of Jeddah have led visiting musicians through the passes in these Appalachians for years. The next to embark on the perilous trail will be Susan Burghardt Rafferty, an American soprano who is to sing at the Continental School in Jeddah Wednesday at 8:30 ticket. She comes to the kingdom with an impressive record. She has twice, once at Juilliard and once at the Aspen Festival, taken the role of the Queen of the Night, a savagely difficult part which, as the Count of Monte Cristo did to Eugene O'Neill's father, tends to enslave those who du it well. "She is a vicious witch. You have to make your voice hard and steely and you and last year sang Ivana Themmen's song cycle Shelter This Candle at Lincoln Center. She was with the New Cleveland Opera for three seasons, one of around 15 chosen from the 800 who auditioned. In March of 1980 she will sing with Hessischer Rundfunk, the Frankfurt Radio orcbestra and in 1981 with the Stockholm Symphony.

It is difficult to succeed as a musician. You have to be very good and very lucky." It's who you know ond what you know." A manager is now an essential appendage Miss Rafferty says. She has one in Sweden and will sing for a New York manager as soon as she can spare the time. Chance is all. She was eager to try out for the Spoleto Festival, for example, but fell ill and says with a stoic shrug, "That's what they call the breaks." Accompanied by Mme. Haffner, Miss Rafferty will be singing works by Schumann, Handel, Donizetti. Rossini, Themnien, Debussy and Gounod. She has already experimented with the Ingrams's drawing room, where "we just sit around and read music and make ourselves happy" but she is well aware of what can suddenly happen to a room filled with people." Seychelles leftist chief snubbed

NAIROBI, Nov. 1110FNS) -President Albert Rene of the Seychelles had run into trouble by trying to conscript children into a year of 'political re-education.'

Rene, who has ruled this tiny Indian Ocean State [population 65,000) since ousting his predecessor, James Mancham, in 1977, after only a year of independence, is determined to convert the islanders into enthusiastic supporters of socialism. Since half the population are under 16, he decided to make a start with them and ordered all 15-year-olds to undergo 12 months indoctrination on the island of Coetivy.

Coetivy is a temote and harren islet more than 200 miles east of Mahe, the main island, where most of the population live. Another problem was that the indoctrination was to be done mainly by Tanzanians, including soldiers, who have been helping to prop up this miniature people's republic since Rene got wind of a hid hy his rival Mancham to stage a comehack.

In the last two weeks, the capital, Port Victoria, has been in tutmoil as thousands of boys and gitls have marched and countermarched chanting, 'Nous pas oule, the Creole equivalent of We won't go.

When a column of determined children stormed into the grounds of State House, the presidential guard was too taken ahack to stop them, and Rene had to come on to the balcony to address them.

China economy burdened by student unemployment

PEKING, Nov. 11 (OFNS) - The Chinese lecturer observed the American trying to take a photograph of the entrance of Peking University without highlighting the buge, crude whitestone status of Mao Tsetung which stands there.

But it is only in the higher intellectual circles that one finds people intelligent and secure enough to bring the gods of the past down to earth and query their pronouncements. It is at this level that even Communism itself can be questioned, although not obviously or stridently. Visiting Westerners are sometimes asked now to set out the rational arguments against Communism so that China can learn, either to be a better Communist country, or else to try something else.

Chatting to four students in a tea bouse in Chengtu, capital of the south-western province of Szechuan, a couple of weeks ago, a Westerner brought the house down with just such an honest

What do you think of Marxism?" they asked. Hesitating only for a moment, he answered that, while it was only his personal opinion, he felt Marxism to be mistaken and out of date.

They roared with laughter, and the whole tea house turned round to see what was up, Fearing that they were laughing out of an embarrassment which might turn nasty, the Westerner hastened to ask if he had offended them.

No, no," they laughed, "We never hear such things in China. Only foreigners talk like that." And that is probably the saddest comment on the present state of China's liberalization, which has started at the top and has such a long way down to

One inevitable result of the liberalization must be a crisis of insecurity among the huge numbers of Communist Party functionaries and bureaucrats who do not have a complete intellectual concept of Marxism but know that their own authority will be weakened if they loosen the leash on nonconforsing, Susan Hill, Brigid Brophy and Margaret Drabble are among the British writers the People's Publishing House is thinking of translating.

Undergraduates know that good jobs depend on good grades, but they are lucky. The almost 300,000 students who have just started their higher education are the fortunate few in the Chinese ratrace. They are pretty well assured of a job of some kind, and not a menial one.

But even the best can fail the entrance exam at the end of their five years secondary schooling. Chairman Hua Guofeng, just before bis recent visit to Britain, revealed that his own daughter had failed her university entrance and that he bad told her to get down to it and work harder for her second

But the Chinese economy, only now beginning to gear itself up for full scale industrial modernization, is still unable to provide jobs for every schoolleaver, and the total number of unemployed young people is put at ahout seven million or more, all awaiting assignment.

In the 1960s Mao dumped this problem into the peasants' lap by sending millions of youngsters down to the farm when they bad finished school and had no work. Today a most interesting series of experiments is being carried out which amount to dumping the problem in the urban proletariat's lap

"Most secondary school leavers," a Ministry of Education official said in Peking, "must get a job either in the cities or the country-side. Some of them will be assigned jobs by the states, others can join collective enterprises. Most of them will get a job; only a few are unlucky," (This seemed optimistic in view of other evidence.)

'Some students," the official went on, "stay at home to continue studying when they fail the exam. During the Cultural Revolution most schoolleavers went to the countryside, and some of them settled down there for good, although others came back to the cities to take jobs there."

It is this 'lost generation' which is causing such concern for the future social fahric. The authorities are still making allowances so that students who missed their chance in the Cultural Revolution period can still enter university even beyond the

Colorado hunter stumbles on fortune

(AP) - Don Stewart went hunting the opening day of the deerelk season in this western state but instead of bringing back a deer he brought home what a local banker believes to be an 1840$1 million gold certificate.

"Stewart said the U.S. Treasury Department is checking the authenticity and current value of the document.

Stewart, 41, who lives with his 83-year-old father in a small home community of 650 residents, says he plans to give any proceeds from his find to the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center.

'It appears to be extremely old paper. You could tell that and the engraving of George Washington in the lower left hand comer really looks authentic," said Ewnie Johnson, officer at the Pine River Bank bere.

Stewart found the certificate Nov. 3 in a metal cylinder in a canyon in La Plata county.

developments in Iran. A background of receding world economies, the news of the resignation of the entire Iran cabinet and the storming of the U.S. embassy in Tehran, with subsequent doubts as to world oil supplies, was enough to throw currency markets into violent fluctuation. The yen was worst hit as the Japanese energy market is currently 70 per cent exposed to imported oil, with the result that the rate of 237 yen per dollar last Monday shot up to nearly 243 yen per dollar by Friday. The decline in the fortune of the yen against the dollar is all the more abrupt in real terms since the dollar suffered a sharp decline mid-week reaching at one point $2.1060 against the pound after a value of $2.0665

In Brisbane, neanwhile, Jeff Thomson, Queensland's explosive fast bowler, is seeking to avenge a hiding England's batsmen gave him two years ago.

"During the four of England in 1977 they gave us a lot of stick. Now I reckon it's ny turn." Thomson said on the eve of Queensland's match against Mike Brearley's tourists starting at the Oval here Monday.

And Thomson's blitz is likely to be aided by a lively wicket because of weekend showers.

"I would have liked another two days rolling the pitch but the rain prevented that," Brisbane cricket ground overseer Jack Mandrew

Thomson has already taken advantage of this season's grassy Gabba Strip to fire an assault which has given him 19 wickets in Queensland's two opening Shoffield Shield matches

USC, Ohio head toward Bowl

Southern Cat and Ohio State took giant strides toward a New Year's clash in the Rose Bowl with U.S. College Football Conference victories Saturday.

Fourth-ranked Southern Cal, getting 245 yards rushing from Charles White and a 10-yard scoring run from Marcus Allen carly in the final period, stopped two late drivers by 15th-ranked Washington and beat the Huskies 24-17.

White, who carried 38 times, set up Allen's TD with runs of 30 and 26 yards. Washington got as far as the Southern Cal one-yard line on one of its drives after that, but the Trojans' defense stiffened.

The only way Southern Cal can be kept out of its 10th Rose Bowl appearance in the last 14 years is if it toses to UCLA and Washington beats Washington State next Saturday and Washington's early season loss to Arizona State is overturned because the Sun devils used ineligible players, as has been charged.

Meanwhile, third-ranked Ohio State moved into position to become the Big Ten's Rose Bowl representative by clohbering lowa

34-7 while No. 14 Purdue was upsetting No. 10 Michigan 24-21. Ohio State is 10-0 overall and 7-1) in the conference, while Purdue and Michigan are 8-2 overall and 6-1 in the big Ten. Ohio State is at Michigan and Purdue at Indiana next week. An Ohio state victory or tie will put the Buckeyes in the Ruse Buwl, A

Michigan victory, coupled with a win by Indiana over Purdue or a tie, will leave Ohio State and Michigan in a tic for the title and Michigan would get the hid because it will have beaten Ohio State. Victories by Michigan and Purdue would set up a three-way tie for the Conference title, hut Ohio State would get the Rose hid-hecause it would have the best overall record. Ohio State forced III turnovers en route to their easy victory. Marcus Marek, a freshman linchacker, intercepted two passes and recovered one fumble as Ohio State clinced the victory by storming to a 27-0 halftime lead.

Talks drag on

UDI almost unnoticed in Salisbury

SALISBURY, Nov. 11 (Agencies) - For the first time in 14 years, the independence bell did not ring out defiantly Sunday to commemorate the day Rhodesia rebelled

The officially-approved celebrations of past years seemed to black politicians in the five-month-old hiracial government of Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa to be an unfitting colebration of white supremacy and the day bas been struck from the list of public holi-

Privately many whites will still commemorate the Unilateral Declaration of Independeoce (UDI) made to stave off the black majority rule that brought legal independence to the territory's neighbors.

But this year the dwindling 230,000 white minority will be looking back over years of debilitating guerrilla war and peering forward towards an uncertain future dominated by the black rule they sought to avoid with Transport Minister Pieter Van der Byl. along with ex-Premier Ian Smith the only signatories of the UDI proclamation still in the cabinet, told a rally recently, "What we held and believed in then (1965) appears perhaps to be largely lost. But I say to you: never regret that we took this brave and bold step .

"It was not a mistake as our enemies make out. As a result of it we bave achieved an identity as a country," he said.

Like Van der Byl, Smith has seen white privilege and rights eroded over the years, first in the March 3, 1978 internal settlement that made Muzorewa prime minister then at the London talks that have stripped whites of their political veto powers.

"We did not really get what we wanted," Smith said of the conference as he left Londoo Saturday night for Rhodesia with the talks still going on. He is returning here Sunday to explain developments at the negotiations to his followers. If the London talks succeed, fresh Britishsupervised elections will be held. This time the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance of Robert Mugabe and Josbua Nkomo will take part. They boycotted last April's election, calling it a facade for the perpetuation of white

Should the guerrillas then come to power, many whites may join the tens of thousands who have already left the country rather than face what they fear would be a life stripped of rights and privilege under austere, socialist

If the talks fail, and the seven-year-old guerrilla war continues, the white minority would also shrink further. The end of the school year next month and the completion of short-term contracts next April both provide convenient times for whites to leave.

"If a settlement means a threat to white jobs and white security then people will go. But they won't panic. They'll try to see how a settlement works," one long-time white resi-

He told reporters at Heathrow Airport: "I never felt lonely and I never regretted it...It was a glorious path of success. We created a nation and held the line against international Communism," He headed home unhappy about Muzorewa's agreement to hand over to a British governor and to effectively strip whites finally of political power. But the veteran political infighter showed no sign of giving up - even now.

Smith, accompanied by two black officials, was among the first group of ministers sent home as Muzorewa wound down his delegation - while Britain continued struggling at the nine-week-old talks to sell its peace plan

We didn't really get what we wanted but there is still a chance," said Smith. "There is a big task of getting the message across to the white populatiun.

Much, he said, would depend on the reaction of Rhodesia's 230,000 whites, who run the military and the economy, to Muzorewa's concessions in London in the hope of peace and an end to sanctions.

And he predicted the conference would end within days with the Front accepting the British plan which calls for a new Britishsupervised election, watched by Commonwealth observers.

Muzorewa won the country's first universal suffrage elections last April held in terms of an unrecognized "internal settlement" between Smith and moderate black leaders.

"It has been hasically encouraging," the 47-year-old senator said late Saturday near the end of a three-day campaign covering nine states in his quest for the Democratic Party's presidential nomination.

Kennedy still has a lead of at least 10 per cent in popularity polls over the 55 year-old president. The only other contender for the Democratic nomination, California Governor Jerry Brown, hardly registers in national Kennedy told reporters he did not expect ing the Democrats and awaiting the announcement - due Tuesday - by former California Governor Ronald Reagan that he is formally entering the race.

Reagan is generally acknowledged to be the front runner among the major GOP candidates, and his announcement will round out the Republican field.

Former Texas Governor John Connally, Tennessee Senator Howard Baker and former CIA Director George Bush are the others believed to have a chance of taking the Republican nomination, although several others are also in the presidential race.

They include Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the party's candidate for Vice President in 1976, and Illinois Rep. Philip Crane, a wellknown spokesman for the party's right wing.

However, the Republicans are apparently hoping that Kennedy and Carter wound each other seriously in the jockeying for the Democratic nomination, since recent public opinion polls have shown that either Kennedy or Carter would beat all the major Republican candidates if the election were
